Introduction

This directory was created for the purpose of helping high school graduates and post-secondary students find financial support to further their education whether it be at a college/CEGEP, vocational training centre or university.

Paying for student fees, tuition, books, and residence expenses can be costly—not to mention stressful. For most post-secondary students, the savings accumulated from part-time or summer jobs and contributions from parents will not cover the large expenses for schooling. Additional money given in the form of scholarships and bursaries can be very helpful towards obtaining a degree without the anxiety of accumulating a great deal of student debt.

This directory offers students advice on applying for bursaries and scholarships. It includes practical information such as the benefits of applying, how to apply for awards, and a comprehensive directory of bursaries and scholarships available to students in the Eastern Townships.

The goal of this guide is to support students by facilitating access to financial resources.

Bursaries and scholarships are there to help make your journey easier, but remember that you must be willing to make the effort and apply!

Understanding Scholarships, Bursaries and Loans

It is important to understand the difference between a scholarship, a bursary, and a loan to navigate the various types of applications.

Awards (scholarships or bursaries) are given depending on specific eligibility criteria. These requirements are listed by the donor institution or organization. It is important to note that the vast majority of scholarships and bursaries can only be awarded to those who apply.

Scholarship

A financial award given to a student based on their academic standing, either in a specific subject or the average of their overall academic year. Citizenship and leadership skills may also be considered depending on the criteria of the scholarship.

Bursary

A financial award given to a student who has attained a specific level of achievement and demonstrates need for financial assistance. Achievement may be attributed based on—but not limited to—academic standing, to where one lives, to the post-secondary program one is enrolled in, and/or extra-curricular activities one has been involved in.

Loan

A financial advance given on the understanding that it must be repaid after the completion of one's studies. In Quebec, many financial institutions offer loan plans for students through a government-managed program that is detailed on page 9 of this guide.

Advantages of Applying for Scholarships and Bursaries

Many students do not realize the benefits that are offered when applying for scholarships and bursaries. Although it can be time-consuming to apply, the potential rewards of applying can make the process well worth it.

Earn money

Money awarded to you goes directly towards your educational expenses to help cover tuition, student fees, and living expenses. It is intended to alleviate financial stress and give you more time to focus on your studies.

Be your own cheerleader

This is your opportunity to be recognized and awarded for your experience and competence. This capacity will go a long way when applying for jobs in the future.

Build your credibility

If you receive an award based on your submission, an achievement or academic standing, you can then use this on your resume and during a job interview.

Make connections

Many scholarship and bursary donors want to help students advance their career aspirations. Thank them by meeting with them in person. This will allow you to connect with leaders in your community.

Best Chances of Success When Applying

“During my time at university, I applied for three or four scholarships a year. Now that I have graduated, I can already see how this experience benefits my career.”

–Addison Smith, 2016

The next section will focus on preparing for success when applying for awards. To begin, there are three things to keep in mind when considering applying for scholarships and bursaries.

It is important to prepare ahead of time.

Award opportunities can be difficult to find and application deadlines vary. Knowing the opportunities in advance will help you to apply for as many awards as you can. Remember that schools, companies, non-profit groups, and the government all offer scholarships and bursaries. Refer to this directory and ask your school guidance counsellor for assistance in finding awards.

Identify your strengths and achievements.

Extracurricular activities, school events, academic achievements, and volunteering are all things you can include in an application, and that can make you eligible for an award. Identify awards that fit your profile, noting deadlines and application procedures. If you are unclear about an application’s criteria, you can always consult with your school guidance counsellor.

Once you have received a letter of acceptance from your post-secondary institution, it is time to start applying for scholarships and bursaries.

In your last year of high school you will be busy working on final projects, brainstorming a possible career path, and selecting a suitable post-secondary program. It is nonetheless important to keep scholarships and bursaries in mind to get an early start.

Application Tips

The application is the key to your success. It gives you an opportunity to demonstrate why you deserve the scholarship or bursary.

When writing an application, remember:

- Read the instructions carefully and make sure you understand the award criteria before beginning.
- Ensure your thoughts are organized, clear, and focused.
- Use concise and simple language.
- When you are finished, read the instructions again and proofread your application to ensure that you have addressed all the award criteria.

Here are some tips to create a strong application:

- Create a neat and organized application document with consistent formatting.
- Include all requested documentation.
- Ensure that any scanned documents are straight and legible.
- Follow delivery instructions as donors may request that applications be mailed, personally delivered, or emailed. If the application is to be sent via email, include a brief introductory text in your email and attach your application as a single PDF document.
- If references are requested, select those who can vouch for your character and work ethic such as a teacher, coach, or employer.
- The point of an application is to be straightforward. Do not exceed a requested word count limit.
- Less is more. Cover your ground with few words and avoid unnecessary words, such as like, really, or very.
- If a photo is requested, provide an up-to-date, professional-looking photo.

Unless otherwise indicated, be sure to format your application:

- Double spaced
- Times New Roman font
- 12-point font
- One-inch top, bottom, and side margins

Why Should I Apply?

Take a minute to reflect on all the information you have read so far. You now know the advantages of applying for a scholarship or bursary, and you have some tips to help you succeed when applying.

Is this enough reason to take the time to apply?

Consider...

You decide to apply and take the average of between 2 to 5 hours to complete a well-thought-out application with the supporting documentation. If you receive the award, that turns out to be somewhere between $100 and $250 dollars an hour for your time spent!

A local organization is offering a bursary of $500

If you do not apply for the bursary, you will have to work 7 hours a day for 5 days at minimum wage ($15.25) in order to raise that same amount of money yourself!

Government of Quebec

Loans and Bursaries Program

For further information, visit:
www.quebec.ca/en/education/student-financial-assistance

The government of Quebec offers a vocational, college and university loans and bursaries program. The Loans and Bursaries Program enables you to pursue full-time vocational training, college, or university studies when you do not have the financial resources to, otherwise, do so.

If you are eligible, the program will assess your financial needs. You will initially receive a loan that you will have to repay at the end of your studies. If the loan is insufficient to cover your needs, you could receive a bursary that you will not have to repay.

During your full-time studies:

- You do not repay any amount related to your loan.
- The government pays the interest on your loan for you.
- You may apply for loans and bursaries each year, as long as you are eligible for the program.

After your full-time studies:

- You could get 15% off the amount of your loan if you complete your studies within the prescribed period.
- You will automatically have 6 months before you start repaying your loan. During this period, you can pay the interest or add it to your loan.
- You benefit from an interest rate offered by the government, which is one of the most advantageous on the market.
- You are entitled to a non-refundable tax credit (tax reduction) for the interest you pay on your loan.

Loans and Bursaries Program

To be eligible for the Loans and Bursaries Program, you must meet the following requirements:

- Be a Canadian citizen, permanent resident, have refugee status, or have protected person status
